The Queensland government's decision to honour the Matildas with a statue outside Suncorp Stadium has been labelled "over the top". The Matildas became the first Australian football team, male or female, to make the semi-finals of a FIFA World Cup as they captured the hearts of the nation on a fairytale run on home soil. Australia played scintillating football in a resurgent 4-0 win over Canada and had the entire country on edge during a thrilling penalty shootout win over France in the quarterfinals as they made history. The Matildas' run came to an end with a semi-final loss against England and a disappointing defeat to Sweden in the bronze medal playoff game. The tournament has been heralded as a breakthrough for women's sport in Australia and sparked calls for equal prize money, as well as increased funding for grassroots football and female sporting facilities.
